EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Order.)

The Convention with Italy which is scheduled to this Order provides (in Article IV) a code of rules for determining the situs of categories of property which may be subject to duty on the death of a person dying domiciled in either country and (in Article VI) a supplementary system of credits. The code does not apply where the effect would be to bring within either country's charge property which, apart from the code, would be outside the charge of the country in question (paragraph (3) of Article III).

In some cases the situs code will itself eliminate double taxation: for example, on the death of a person domiciled in the United Kingdom, bearer shares in a company incorporated in the United Kingdom will not be liable to duty in Italy even though the share certificates were physically located in Italy at the date of the deceased's death. But where, notwithstanding the application of the situs code, property is chargeable with duty by both countries, Article VI provides for a credit to be given by the country in which the property is not situated for duty paid in the other country.

Rules are provided in paragraph (2) of Article II to establish the domicile of a deceased person for the purposes of this Convention when he would otherwise be deemed to be domiciled in both countries.

Article VIII provides for the exchange of information between the taxation authorities of the two countries.

The Convention, which extends also to the Estate Duty (separate from that in Great Britain) which is imposed in Northern Ireland (Article X), will apply in connection with deaths occurring after the date of exchange of instruments of ratification.
